

Authorization of New Capital Improvements Project – The University of North Carolina at Greensboro

The Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro has requested the authority to establish a new capital improvements project.

This project is the first phase of a planned five-phase renovation of the Jackson Library. Work will include improving the accessibility and circulation in the four-story section of the building built in 1950; renovating the basement level for the Government Information and Data Services Center, periodicals reading room, and library archives; and creating a Cyber Café. The library will remain open during all phases of the renovation.

The project, estimated to cost $1,000,000, will be funded from available carry-forward funds. Carry-forward funds are operating funds unexpended on June 30 and, pursuant to state law, are “carried forward” into the next fiscal year to support one-time expenditures.

It is recommended that this project be authorized and that the method of financing as proposed by the University of North Carolina at Greensboro be approved.
