

10. Learning Innovation Strategy Update.....Matthew Rascoff

Situation: Discussion of the University's strategy for online and blended learning

Background: Following the presentation of online enrollments for academic year 2013-14, Mr. Rascoff will lead a discussion the University's learning innovation goals and the progress that has been made toward reaching them.

Assessment: The University has made progress in serving non-traditional student populations with more flexible online programs (fully online students now represent 9% of our student population) and in ensuring that residential education programs are using the best tools and pedagogical approaches available. This discussion will review the accomplishments of the past year and cover current efforts in six strategic areas for technology-enabled learning innovation: (1) Marketing; (2) Partnerships; (3) Student services; (4) Faculty Development; (5) R&D; and (6) Policy.

Action: This is for Information Only.
