

7. Performance Review of Tenured Faculty

Situation: Presentation of the seventeenth Performance Review of Tenured Faculty, or Post-Tenure Review.

Background: These processes on campuses are intended to support and encourage excellence among tenured faculty by recognizing and rewarding exemplary faculty performance and provide a clear plan and timetable for improvement of performance of faculty found deficient. Revisions to policy and guidelines were approved by the BOG and President Ross in 2014. This report reflects reviews conducted under the previous policy and guidelines.

Assessment: A total of 715 faculty were reviewed over the past year, of which 16 were deemed deficient based on BOG and institutional criteria.

Action: This is for information only.

Introduction

Since 1998-99, the Division of Academic Affairs has collected campus data on the outcomes of post-tenure review of faculty.<sup>1</sup> The policy and guidelines for Performance Review of Tenured Faculty, or post-tenure review, were adopted by the University of North Carolina's Board of Governors (BOG) in 1997 and strengthened in 2014.<sup>2</sup> The 2014 update included guidelines that "...assure the continuing rigorous application of post-tenure review as intended by the Board of Governors." The policy states that it is intended "to support and encourage excellence among tenured faculty" by:

1. Recognizing and rewarding exemplary faculty performance.
2. Providing for a clear plan and timetable for improvement of performance of faculty found unsatisfactory.
3. Include a recommendation for discharge, in the most serious cases, for those whose performance remains unsatisfactory, providing for the imposition of appropriate sanctions.

University of North Carolina (UNC) campuses developed their own policies and procedures within the BOG's requirements, which included the following:

1. Each campus must ensure a cumulative review no less frequently than every five years for each tenured faculty member.
2. Involve peers as reviewers.
3. Include written feedback to faculty members as well as a mechanism for faculty response to the evaluation.
4. Require individual development or career plans for each faculty member receiving less than satisfactory ratings in the cumulative review, including specific steps designed to lead to improvement, a specified time line for development, and a clear statement of consequences should improvement not occur within the designated time line.

The recently amended policies and guidelines require time to implement and report. The data presented in this report reflect the previous policy language and the categories of post-tenure review outcomes presented herein align with previous reporting conventions. See Appendix A for links to the current post-tenure review policies for every UNC campus that grants tenure. The 2015-16 report will reflect the new policies implemented on each campus.

Outcomes of Performance Reviews

As part of the seventeenth year in which reviews have been conducted, information for 2014-15 post-tenure review activities was collected from campuses. Across the campuses, tenured faculty accounted for 36% of all faculty and those eligible for post-tenure reviews (tenured faculty with more than five years of tenure) accounted for 21% of all faculty.

As summarized in Table 1, 715 tenured faculty members across the system were reviewed in 2014-15, 16 (2.2%) of whom were found “unsatisfactory” based on institutional criteria.<sup>3</sup> Table 1 includes information on the outcomes of post-tenure performance review reported by UNC campuses for the last ten years.

The increases in total faculty reviewed in 2008-09 and 2013-14 deserve a note of explanation. From the beginning of the post-tenure review process, the majority of East Carolina University’s academic units chose to review tenured faculty in the same year. Thus, they review most faculty every fifth year. This is in contrast to other campuses that choose to review a subset of tenured faculty every year.

Year	# Faculty Reviewed	# of Faculty Found Unsatisfactory	% Found Unsatisfactory

<sup>3</sup> Under the previous policy, the various campus outcomes of post-tenure reviews were grouped and presented in BOG reports as “unsatisfactory,” “satisfactory,” “above average,” and “superior.” Under the new policy that will be implemented in the 2015-16 fiscal year, the review categories will be at least “exceeds expectations,” “meets expectations,” and “does not meet expectations.”

Table 2 shows the number of faculty found unsatisfactory in post-tenure performance reviews at each campus over the past ten years.

For this post-tenure review cycle, the majority of tenured faculty reviewed were tenured associate professors (57.9%), with full tenured professors (41%), assistant tenured professors (0.7%), and tenured librarians (0.4%) also being reviewed. Sixteen faculty (2.2%) were deemed “unsatisfactory” by teams of peer reviewers, which is a lower percentage than the previous year. Post-tenure reviews were overwhelmingly positive with 67.1% of the faculty receiving satisfactory performance reviews, 10.2% deemed above average, and 20.4% given superior performance reviews. See Appendix B for more details.

If a faculty member receives an “unsatisfactory” review, they work closely with their departments to make improvements and are reviewed annually until their performance is deemed “satisfactory.” Progress of these faculty are monitored closely by departments, deans, and colleges to improve performance. The length of time in the plan differs by campus, typically ranging between one to three years. Nearly all of the faculty given “unsatisfactory” reviews in 2014-15 received this designation for the first time and they have begun working with their departments on mandatory development plans as detailed in each campus' policies and procedures related to UNC Policy 400.3.3.

Faculty found to be “unsatisfactory” over the last three post-tenure review cycles participated in and completed (or continue to participate in) mandatory development plans. Some faculty have retired in conjunction with the post-tenure review findings and others have begun phased retirements or other types of approved leave. For details regarding last year's post-tenure review results and their current status, see Appendix C.

In 2014-15, there were a small number of tenured assistant professors and tenured librarians reviewed across UNC campuses. Only a few campuses provide tenure to and review librarians, which helps to explain the small numbers for that category. For tenured assistant professors, there are two primary reasons for the relatively small number being reviewed that are detailed in UNC Policy 400.3.3.1[G] and supported by campus information. First, there are very few assistant professors eligible for post-tenure review, as the majority of faculty with this rank have not been granted tenure. In 2014, of the 5,639 faculty eligible for post-tenure review, only 57 (1.0%) held the rank of assistant professor. Of these 57 assistant professors, 5 were reviewed during this post-tenure review cycle. Second, a review undertaken to decide promotion to a higher rank is considered a cumulative review, satisfying the requirement for a review every five years and further explaining why the numbers for tenured assistant professors being reviewed is so low.<sup>4</sup> Many assistant professors with tenure may choose to apply for a tenure promotion to the rank of associate professor and are therefore not counted as having undergone a post-tenure review for the purposes of this report.

4 See UNC Policy 400.3.3.1[G] under Guideline #2 for language regarding granting tenure or deciding on promotion serving as a cumulative review.
